

Sailor Held as Trunk Slayer At Montevideo

Prisoner Accused of Being Eugene Le Roy, but Police of Uruguay Believe Authorities Have Made Error

Never in Detroit, He Says

Plenty of Chances to Flee Since Ship Was Notified Off Brazil of Charges

MONTevideo, Sept. 15.—Morris Fox, who was arrested recently aboard the British freighter Dryden because of his resemblance to Eugene Le Roy, alleged to be the perpetrator of the Detroit and New York "trunk murder," was detained for identification to-day by the Uruguayan police when the Dryden arrived from Rio de Janeiro. The action was at the request of the United States authorities.

Fox was arrested on August 25 when the Dryden arrived at Rio de Janeiro, but in the absence of an extradition treaty between the United States and Brazil he was detained on board the vessel until it proceeded to this port. Montevideo Police Skeptical

The police here, who possess only an inadequate description of Le Roy furnished by the American Legation, are said to be skeptical that Fox is the man wanted, basing their conclusions on preliminary questioning and an examination of documents produced by Fox to show that he is not Le Roy. A slight scar on his right leg, however, and several other characteristics are said to correspond with the furnished description.

Fox declared to The Associated Press that he could produce a score of witnesses to prove that he was in New York when the murder was committed, and that he never was in Detroit.

"Why don't they let me go back to the United States immediately?" he asked. "I can show in a minute where I have been."

Fox produced a certificate from Toronto naturalization authorities showing that he is the son of Max Fox, a naturalized Russian Jew, and that he was born in Russia, in September, 1900.

Worked With Father Here

Reciting his movements since April, 1919, he said he was in Norfolk at that time, where he joined the Seamen's Union, shipping aboard the steamer Lake Orange for Cuba in June. He returned to New York in May and started to work with his father as a garment maker. On September 9, 1919, he went with his father to Toronto, where he remained until January 17, 1920, when he returned to New York, where he worked at the garment trade until he shipped aboard the Dryden. He went to sea, he said, because it was an off season in garment making and he was pressed for money.

The Uruguayan police to-day questioned the Spanish-speaking members of the Dryden crew. They said Fox neither spoke nor understood Spanish, a knowledge Le Roy is said to have possessed. Later when Fox was questioned by the police, he seemed to have no comprehension of Spanish. Fox declared he had had several opportunities to escape from the Dryden, especially at Santos, a port of call between here and Rio de Janeiro, and that if he were Le Roy he naturally would have taken advantage of these opportunities.

Beeckman Won't Run Again

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 15.—Governor R. Livingston Beeckman announced to-day in a letter to Joseph P. Burlingame, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, that he would not be a candidate for reelection. Governor Beeckman is completing his sixth year as the state's chief executive, and since the adoption of the state constitution no one has held the office for a longer period.
